As the afternoon approached, we went to the river. I'd seen many beautiful places since my arrival, but this was my favourite. Om took me to the river's edge and pointed at the clear water. I knew I should've stayed back but I could not resist dipping my hands into the clear, luscious liquid. "You're so lucky have this river close by. I'd give anything to go for a splash right now." Om looked at me blankly for a second and then smiled. Despite no modern-day toothpaste, she'd the most beautiful sparkly teeth that I had ever seen.

I knew I should've stayed back but I couldn't resist dipping my hands into the clear, luscious liquid. "You're so lucky have this river close by. I'd give anything to take a dip inside right now." Om looked at me vacantly for a second and then smiled. She didn't understand my words, and yet she knew exactly what I was saying. I remember thinking that despite having no modern-day toothpaste, she'd the most beautiful sparkly teeth that I had ever seen.

As the afternoon approached, we wandered to the river. I'd seen many picturesque places since my arrival, but this was my favourite. Om took me to the tributary's edge and pointed at the clear water. I knew I should've stayed back but I couldn't resist dipping my hands into the clear, luscious liquid. "You're so lucky have this river close by. I'd give anything to take a dip inside the river right now." Om looked at me vacantly for a moment and then smiled. She didn't understand my words, and yet she knew exactly what I was saying. I remember thinking that despite having no modern-day toothpaste, she'd the most beautiful sparkly teeth that I had ever seen.

Over the banks, a group of men were gazing over the edge with tall spears and nets at the ready. "Don't worry Om," I reassured calmly, "I won't disturb anything beneath us."
